INCREDIBLE EXCHANGE!

NOW Anita Balka treasures the boy she's always wanted.

MOMS SWAP NEWBORNS!

HAPPY mom Ionna Dadura holds the baby girl she got from Anita.

One wanted a boy, the other wanted a girl!

By MATT BETT/Weekly World News

ODESSA, Ukraine — Two moms were unhappy with the genders of their newborns, so they came up with an outrageous solution: They traded babies with each other before leaving the hospital!

Picky mom Anita Balka says she and her husband, Yure, wanted a boy but got a girl. And her hospital roommate, Ionna Dadura, says she and hubby Petruso wanted a girl but got a boy.

So they swapped!

"We are so happy," gushes Anita. "Ionna has given Yure and me such a gift. She is an angel."

Ionna says she and Anita grew very close during their hospital stay.

"We shared many secrets," she explains. "I learned of the Balkas' money problems. I whispered to Anita that deep in my heart, I preferred my first child to be a girl. Making our trade was the perfect thing to do."

The Balkas, who already had five daughters, were counting on having a boy to eventually take over their struggling wheat farm. They were crushed when Anita gave birth to yet another daughter.

"I was devastated on what should have been a most joyous day," admits Yure Balka. "Then Anita told me of the deal she made with Ionna and I buckled over in joy."

Ionna's husband, Petruso, was less enthusiastic. "What kind of father gives up his baby?" he asks. "But now I realize how important this was to my wife, and I ultimately allowed the exchange.

"I've been delivering babies for nearly 30 years and have never seen such an arrangement," says the attending physician. "Since both babies were healthy and beautiful, and since both sets of parents agreed, there was no reason for me to object."

Life will never be the same for Ionna, a university librarian, and Petruso, a professional dancer. "We're moving to the country," announces Petruso. "As much as we intend to care for our newly acquired daughter and make her our own, Ionna and I will stay close to the Balkas — and to the little boy we gave up."

Yure agrees. "I expect our little boy and the Dadaras' little girl will get along famously. I expect them to be as close as brother and sister."

Yure also welcomes the Dadaras'

I'm thirsty, not dead

Better watch out if you have a heart attack in Sicily — you could wake up in a casket!

That's what happened to 74-year-old Roberto De Simone who'd been pronounced brain-dead at the hospital.

His body was sent home, the local undertaker was alerted and preparations were made for his burial — even though he was only in a coma.

As the family wept over his still-living body, the coffin-ready "corpse" opened his eyes and asked for some water.

If that had happened to me, I'd have asked for a drink a lot stronger than water!

A marriage that really works

A businessman in Romania is so sick of his wife nagging him after he's had a tough day at the office, he's started paying her to shut her up!

Nicolae Popa says he spends up to five hours a day at work on the telephone, and he just wants to go to bed when he gets home.

His wife Magda is now earning $300 for every non-annoying month.

I wish I'd thought of that before my divorce. In the long run, it might have actually saved me money!

Crashing the party

A guy in Utah spent his 73th birthday alone in his car — but it wasn't by choice!

Harry Levy was trapped in his car after he swerved to avoid an animal and his car veered off the highway, landing in a ravine where it couldn't be seen from the road.

Levy spent four days stranded, unable to reach the $67 in groceries in his backseat, until he was finally rescued.

If I get trapped on my 75th, I hope it's inside a cake with a hot blonde surprise.

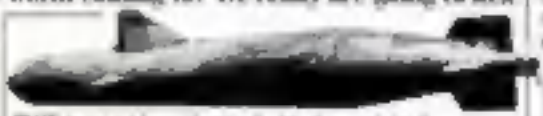
To Whom It May Concern,

I loved your December 1 issue. It interested me very much, yet the four-legged woman on Page 1 confused me. In my 10th-grade biology class, we are studying genetics and it seems impossible to have a child with four legs. Please explain how this woman has four legs instead of two, and I will willingly believe.



THIS is no midget ghost sub. It's the real deal!

Thanks for your time.
Sherry D.
San Diego, Calif.

Dear Sherry, Thank you for your lovely letter. You ask an excellent question. In your biology class, you probably studied mutations. That's what causes people or animals to be born with extra limbs or even an extra head. Mutations are certainly a lot more common than you might think. Somebody you know may even have an extra finger or toe!

* * * * * *

Dear WWN,

The midget sub must be a ghost ship, and its occupants must be ghosts. (Weekly World News, January 21). There are many such vessels sailing the waterways of the world. People sometimes board them, and they get off in a hurry!

Holly M.
Tucson, Ariz.

So answer to this question. Does a midget ghost sub have midget ghosts on board?

Dear Editor,

I find it very appalling to know that just to make money some wombat is teaching teen who are potentially attackers to brutalize women (WWN, January 28). Women need to take self-defense classes to protect themselves. I believe the rate of women attacking men is so much lower than men on women.

If this class continues, you can just plan on building more prisons.

Once a victim,

Ryan, we totally agree, and we applaud you for your courage in speaking out on this horrible issue. 10 telltale signs your wife or girlfriend is a secret lap dancer!

By MIKE FOSTER, Weekly World News

Guys, your wife or girlfriend could secretly be moonlighting as a lap dancer — and you don't have a clue!

Surveys show that one in 25 college coeds now take it all off to help pay their tuition. And the number of married women dancing in strip clubs nationwide is estimated to be close to 10 million — many shucking down to their birthday suits without their husbands' knowledge or consent.

"Today, many women see nothing wrong with using their bodies to make extra cash," says a sociologist.

"You may think that you've landed Miss Innocent, but if you're in a relationship with a young woman with a nice figure, there's a good chance that in her spare time, she's grinding her G-string-clad backside in some stranger's lap."

Here, from ex-perts, are 10 signs that your lady is a closet lap dancer:

1 VAMPISH WALK. A once-awkward, wholesome girl-next-door type who now swivels her hips in an exaggerated manner — and has no trouble strutting about in six-inch heels — fits the profile of a stripper.

2 COARSE LANGUAGE. If your lady starts cussing like a sailor, it's a good bet she picked up the bad habit from her lowlife "colleagues" backstage.

3 FLIPPIN' SEXY UNDERWEAR. A gal who used to complain about how "uncomfortable" she felt in thongs and suddenly has an undies drawer chock full of them may now be used to wearing a G-string hours at a time.

4 SLUTTY BOOTY LIBERATION. When your mate has to pick up something from the ground, does she kneel like a lady — or bend over, thrusting her warez?

5 SUDDENLY HAS MONEY FOR "LITTLE EXTRAS." She starts showing up with fancy earrings, designer shoes and other items you didn't pay for.

6 OVERLY FLIRTATIONS WITH YOUR PALS. You may spot her perched on a buddy's lap at a cocktail party, making small talk. This could be a position she's grown very comfortable with.

7 ALWAYS HAS PLENTY OF DOLLAR BILLS ON HAND. Or when she gets change back at the supermarket, she may reflexively tuck it in the hand of her underwear.

8 DANCES DIRTY. A gal who wiggles around in the laps of strange men for cash is likely to fall into raunchy, grown-to-butt moves on the dance floor.

9 WON'T TELL YOU WHERE SHE WORKS. Says she has a "great new part-time job working as a cocktail waitress," but won't tell you where she works.

10 ODDLY DISHONEST. In the past, she never even

IF YOUR wife has been making hot moves like this in the bedroom, she may be a secret lap dancer, experts say.

SADDAM'S SECRET

Saddam Hussein is a demented deviant with enough fetishes and phobias to fill a psychology textbook, according to former aides — including his former psychiatrist — who've defected from the wacky Iraqi's inner circle.

"He's a full-blown obsessive-compulsive," reveals psychiatrist Dr. Najji Ibrahim, who treated the dictator over a period of several months. "He washes his hands every hour, and if the housekeeping staff doesn't have every bathroom stocked with at least 25 brand-new bars of soap each day, he has them executed."

THIS amazing photo of Saddam's underground bunker was taken by a former palace custodian. Clearly shown are video games, a bowling alley and a statue of Michael Jackson.

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein's underground bunker is a wartime fortress, but is also filled with oddities and diversions that point to the dictator's declining mental stability.

A longtime palace custodian who escaped Iraq gives the outside world a behind-the-scenes look into Saddam's secret world. In exchange for asylum in our country, the Iraqi refugee is offering insights to help the Pentagon more effectively wage war against Hussein. Weekly World News has also obtained an exclusive photo of the the hidden fortress, shown above.

"The bunker is enormous and fortified on all ends with 50 inches of premium-grade concrete underground caverns, the spy says it has been easy.

"Saddam has unlimited funds from oil profits and everyone around him fears for their lives. They do exactly what the dictator commands. While his people are starving in shacks on the surface, Saddam is living in splendor in his bunker."

Among the stranger items in Saddam's bunker is a shrine to pop singer Michael Jackson. "Hussein is a big fan of the King of Pop. Saddam has a large collection of memorabilia and enjoys wearing a sequined glove when he does the moonwalk. Of course, everyone in attendance is expected to applaud."

THIS is a closeup of Saddam's giant statue of Michael Jackson, his idol. It stands 12 feet and is carved from stone.

"The dictator is an excellent football player," he says.

Mental health professionals believe that Hussein's enthusiasm for Michael Jackson offers clues to the dictator's shaky emotional state.

Among the other things that Saddam has in his bunker:

● A peep show, where Iraqi women slowly emerge from beneath their burqas.

● Besides the statue of M.J., the Iraqi ruler also has a remarkably lifelike Pee-wee Herman statue. "The dictator does a perfect imitation of the voice of Pee-wee," says Hussein boids and wagers on games races.

● A bowling alley where he proudly boasts high score. Of course, none of his henchmen have dared to beat the dictator. The rumor around the Iraqi camp is that many of the bowling pins are molded from the ground bones of overambitious Iraqi politicians who "got in his way."

THIS artist's conception shows what Saddam looks like in drag — dressed as an American housewife!

Iraqi ruler is a transvestite who plays with dolls, says former doc!

WASHINGTON — Saddam Hussein has a secret cross-dressing fetish and plays with dolls — and even turns his defiance of U.N. weapons inspectors into a bizarre sexual game!

So says Saddam's former psychiatrist, Dr. Naji Ibrahim, who fled his homeland of Iraq after reportedly enduring months of perverted confessions from the demented dictator.

Inside sources say that Ibrahim escaped with the aid of CIA operatives, who convinced him it was in Saddam's own interest for Ibrahim to reveal the confidential conversations between doctor and patient.

"He always had his George W. Bush and Tony Blair dolls with him, and often he'd clutch them to his chest and cry, 'Why won't you love me?'

"He's a transvestite who likes to dress up as an American housewife — with a flowery dress, a purse and a necklace — and walk the halls of his home pretending he's touring the royal palace.

"One of his favorite nighttime fantasies is to be tied to a bed and tickled by female secret agents who tickle him unmercifully to force him to tell where he has his secret chemical and biological weapons hidden."

"He was just too far gone by the time I met him," Ibrahim says. "He's really just a very

SCENES from La'iba al-Waladaani (The Two Boys Played) — a gay porn film — show a younger Saddam Hussein.

Saddam starred in gay porn films

The young, desperate soldier did anything for money, says biographer!

KUWAIT CITY — Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein has been caught with his pants down — literally. A shocking 1968 porn film has surfaced, in which the flamboyant strongman appears performing raunchy homosexual acts!

The image quality of the grainy 16mm film, uncovered by the Kuwaiti secret police, is poor — but experts who've taken a close look at the hairy-chested actor are "100 percent certain" it is a younger, trimmer Saddam.

"There is no doubt in my mind that this is Saddam — there's no mistaking those eyes and that distinctive nose," declares Hussein biographer Sadiq al-Sabah of Kuwait, who's seen the eye-popping footage first-hand.

"It may be hard to believe that a man who now leads one of the most powerful nations in the Middle East once acted in blue movies, but to anyone familiar with how reckless and sexually promiscuous Saddam was in his youth, this will come as no surprise. It's also a known fact that the young, desperate soldier did anything for money.

"Saddam appeared in as many as 45 of these films under a variety of stage names, most frequently Omar Shaddid," reveals the respected author.

SADIQ al-SABAH

Sabah claims the stunning XXX-rated film, La'iba al-Waladaani (The Two Boys Played), were leaked to a Kuwait news magazine after authorities found a small stash of illicit porn in the vault of a recently deceased sheik.

Release of the pictures has resulted in howls of protest from Baghdad.

"President Hussein is the manliest of men. He would never behave in such a repugnant manner," says an Iraqi spokesman. "This is CIA propaganda."

But rumors that Saddam appeared in gay porn films in his younger days have dogged him for decades and almost torpedoed his political career when he was a rising star in the ruling Baath Party.

"There have been persistent rumors in the past, but now it looks like the Kuwaitis have found the smoking gun," says a State Department source.

Al-Sabah claims that Saddam, then a struggling law student, acted in porn to make ends meet — and because he was addicted to pot-sex.

In the newly uncovered 46-minute prison flick, Saddam, then just 31, plays a naive young peasant who is wrongly convicted and sent to jail. He is initiated into homosexuality by a series of older and more experienced cons.

Image 1991, when U.S. sanctions, for quit, there has been a 40 percent increase in Iraqi gay porn production

"Saddam's acting in the picture is actually quite good," al-Sabah notes. "One scene, in which he buries his face in a pillow and cries, is an touching you almost can forget you're watching a low-budget sexploitation film."

BAGHDAD — U.S. war planners hope that by toppling madman Saddam Hussein, we'll usher in a new generation of leadership in Iraq.

But experts warn that the two people who stand first in line to inherit power, his sons Uday and Qusay, are even more evil and unstable!

Uday, 38, and Qusay, 36, are both chips off the old block — cunning, vicious and incredibly twisted, with rape and brutal torture among their favorite sports, an alarming profile in Newsweek reveals.

Uday is "the reckless scion, overcooked heir apparent," while kid brother Qusay is "calmer, colder and ultimately more dangerous," the report says.

"A cornered Uday would not hesitate to lash out with chemical and biological weapons. But Qusay is the greater risk to actually control the weapons and find a way to use them against U.S. forces or the American people."

Violence was bred into the beast of Baghdad's sons from an early age. As infants, they were given hand grenades as toys and they spent quality time with dad by joining him on his outings to the torture chamber.

"He may well have made his sons into psychopaths."

WORLD'S MOST EXPENSIVE COFFEE IS MADE FROM CAT POOP

By KATE McCLAIRE

BOCA [illegible], Fla. — People everywhere are spending big bucks to gulp down the world's rarest, most expensive coffee — a fancy brew that can cost almost $400 a pound.

And it's made from cat poop.

Kopi Luwak coffee is imported from Indonesia, where workers feed coffee beans to the lowly, tree-dwelling cat. The beans pick up flavor-enhancing acids and enzymes from the cat's digestive system, but they don't actually break down like other food eaten by the civet.

Instead, when the cat defecates the beans pop out whole — and go straight to the factory to be roasted and sold to people who can afford the eye-popping price.

Only 100 pounds of Kopi Luwak are made every year. American prices vary from $175 per pound to almost $400.

The Coffee Critic, a California company that sells gourmet beans, offers Kopi Luwak for $175 a pound when it's available. A spokeswoman says most people get six to nine cups of brewed coffee from a pound of beans — which means a cup of the stuff could cost anywhere from $3 to $6.

Coffee connoisseurs say the costly drink actually tastes pretty good. The Coffee Critic Web site — www.thecoffeecritic.com — had this to say after brewing up some of the luxury beans:

"The aroma was rich and strong, and the coffee was incredibly full-bodied, almost syrupy. It was thick, with a hint of chocolate, and lingered on the tongue with a long, clean aftertaste."

Other coffee drinkers also have good things to say about the crappy roast. One taster proclaims it "the best cup of coffee I ever had."

But one top coffee gourmet turns his nose up at Kopi Luwak. "There was something vaguely sweet about

CAN'T WE ALL JUST GET ALONG?

A CAT and dog staying up to watch videos? How this is news! Weekly World News reader Jackson A. Stevens sent us this photo of his nephew's pets: Shadow, a 12-year-old female German shepherd, and Frankenstein, a 2-year-old male kitty. "Shadow loves Frankenstein so much," Jackson tells us, "and Frankenstein loves to lie between Shadow's legs." This could lead to a new expression: Getting along like cats and dogs!

Readers fire back at Ed!

Ed Anger has been getting more hate mail than ever lately — and the old goat loves it! He claims that it shows people are really reading his column — and thinking about what he's got to say. Wise ass readers are the ones who are pig-licking mad! Of Ed's got some pretty unpopular opinions, and he's got people stomping on the Ed to get to a re-button. Here is a random sampling of the huge outpouring of mail we've had about Ed's re-cent columns. Let's dip into the old mailbag!

Dear Mr. Ed:

In your February 31 issue, you say to make Iraq a state. Are you nuts? All we need to do is to control their oil fields. Who wants all those sand people voting in our next election. They'd probably screw it up even worse than Florida. I used to have a higher opinion of your cot-tems, but this is completely off base.

Ed sez: WE SHOULD HAVE A-BOMBED EUROPE

I'm madder than Adolf Eichmann at a B'nai B'rith meeting at how these self-righteous Germans and cowardly French have been gumming up our President's war plans against Iraq!

Folks, President Bush and Saddam Hussein have been playing the biggest game of chicken the world has ever known. So these Nervous Nelly Europeans had let our President on the dancing instead of getting hysterical and trying to grab the wheel — there's a chance Saddam would've backed down and disarmed by now. Instead, lots of folks will die in a bloody war.

Quite frankly, I'm not interested in hearing any lectures from guilty people to my goose-stepping, gas-chamber loving Germans. Every time you give me a chance, I'm going to explain to Fatherland to include all of Europe [illegible] that we should have nuked them instead of the Japs back in World War II. If we had, we wouldn't be hearing all this whining out of them now.

[illegible] Europeans are so bitter. When [illegible] to those selfish pieces of garbage [illegible] levels in [illegible] France were [illegible] which only stood up to [illegible] we should have left them there.

Bottom line: The whole problem with Europe [illegible] with the Soviet Axis of Evil [illegible] already conquered in advance.

All the [illegible] England, stepped on the [illegible] and other bad [illegible] the Americans liberated Europe. Why [illegible] look on their faces [illegible] ungrateful bastards!

The decent Germans came over [illegible] are brought their hard work ethic [illegible] to build cars and the Autobahn. [illegible] Europe left [illegible] Europe [illegible] the drugs — the poor users [illegible] realize that Americans [illegible] opportunity to [illegible] and [illegible] make the trip.

That's why men in Greece and Italy [illegible] had great grandparents who didn't [illegible] around [illegible] the battle of Normandy [illegible] So let's not worry that the stupid French, Germans and the rest of those cheese-eating Europeans don't support our President. Worldwide pimple plague will strike millions of teens

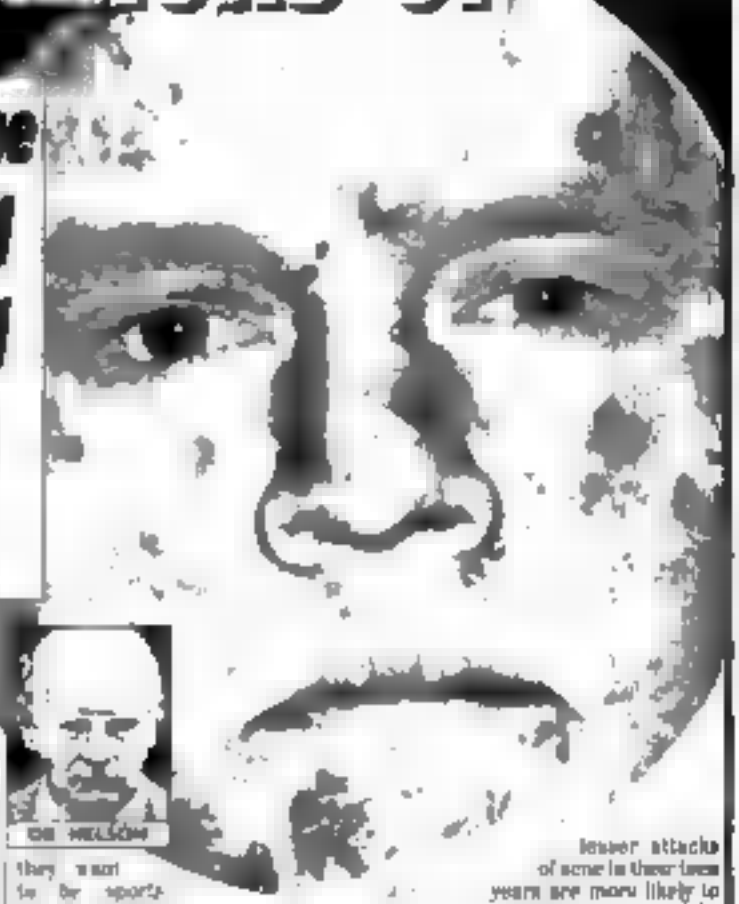
Bizarre acne disease will turn school hunks into hermits!



NEW SUPER-PIMPLES will disfigure millions of teens, but docs hope to find a cure soon!

DR. NELSON

By DAN RUCK
Weekly World News

ATLANTA — Teenagers across the world soon will be battling the most horrendous social disease of their young lives — a global attack of incurable acne that will cause ugly, red, pus-filled pimples to break out by the dozens on the faces of everyone aged 12 to 19 and will leave many scarred for life!

Dr. Perry Nelson, epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, confirms reports of the coming plague and says researchers are working desperately to find a cure or treatment.

Especially frustrating for medical sleuths is the fact that the new strain of acne is spread by the simple acts of kissing and touching — expressions of love or lust or tenderness that seems unavoidable to practically every living youngster — Nelson says.

The new strain is not affected by current over-the-counter acne medications.

"Even the strongest prescription acne drugs seem to have little effect," Nelson notes in despair.

He says outbreaks of the new strain, acarum facio-pilloctaloid, appear most severe among young male athletes who use steroids to enhance sports performance.

"Weight lifters, wrestlers, soccer players and football linemen are at greatest risk, I would guess," Nelson says. "But this strain also seems to show up commonly in school-age become popular for some reason."

"Rather than robust, rosy-cheeked visions of virile manhood, a lot of these beet-cakes are going to grow up to be scarred and embittered men, I'm afraid," Nelson predicts.

He says young girls who take athletes also are at risk of developing the most severe cases of the new acne because the disease is most easily spread through kissing and close personal contact.

Nelson predicts the new acne strain could have drastic sociological effects if a cure or treatment is not found.

"We know using steroids makes the new acne worse, but an awful lot of kids — in America especially — think they have to use steroids if they want to be sports stars," says Nelson.

"At the same time, youngsters who are not involved in sports — artists, dancers, musicians, poets and so forth — and who don't socialize with athletes and have never used muscle building steroids, seem to construct less severe acne attacks."

"Obviously, persons who suffer lesser attacks of acne in their teen years are more likely to have clear complexions in adulthood," the expert concludes.

"Unless we can find some sort of acne cure, I can foresee a future in which artistic people are considered the most beautiful on Earth, and sports will be relegated to only the ugliest, most deformed and dangerous among us."

DEPRESSED PACHYDERM IS MISSING — AND NOBODY CAN FIND HIM!

COBEREZ, Germany — An elephant doesn't exactly blend into the scenery, especially in this country.

But somehow a giant has managed to completely disappear with a circus elephant and cops can't find the missing behemoth anywhere.

"It's easier to hide an elephant than you might think," says a spokesman for local police who are completely stumped.

They say the elephant named Kenia was stolen from the Hagleman circus by a man who defied an order not to move her.

Police are also on the death of another Harleian elephant and experts say the depressed pachyderm need all to rest and recover.

"We still have several places in mind where we'll look," says the police spokesman.

Sources say the elephant jacker was an animal-rights activist who believed he was rescuing the big beast from mistreatment by the circus.

Harleian has been under attack for several months as

FBI'S MOST WANTED!

JESSE JAMES HOLLYWOOD

YOU CAN earn a reward of $20,000 for information that helps bring in this accused killer, but be careful if you meet him. The FBI says the long-haired fugitive is a ruthless head who ordered the execution-style murder of a 15-year-old kid!

The trail got start in August 2000. Hollywood and four other men planned to kidnap a Los Angeles man who owed them some money. They couldn't find their intended target, so they snatched his 15-year-old stepbrother instead. They took the boy to a remote area where they tied him up, gagged him and after five days of no ransom money, they shot him dead. His body was later found in a shallow grave by a group of hikers.

Hollywood's four alleged accomplices were arrested, but Hollywood remains on large. He has been featured on the TV crime show America's Most Wanted.

The dead boy's family has put up $10,000 of the Hollywood reward — and in an amazing show of compassion, they say they'll put it in a college trust fund for Hollywood's younger brother if Hollywood surrenders of his own accord.

Hollywood, who also uses the name Brian Michaels, has changed his appearance several times. He is 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighs 140 pounds, with blue eyes and blond or brown hair that could be long, short or close-shaved. He may have a goatee. A native of Saratoga Park, Calif., he also has ties to Colorado Springs, Colo. He's known to like new custom and low-rider cars.

Hollywood should be considered armed and dangerous.

WOMAN PREGNANT 14 YEARS

THE UNTOLD STORY!

On December 22 — 14 years and two months from the day the egg was implanted — Tomiko Orihata gave birth to little Seigi. Mother and baby are doing fine.

AN ORDEAL OF LOVE & PAIN!

EDITOR'S NOTE Tomiko Orihata, 37, made medical history when she gave birth to a baby boy after a pregnancy that lasted an astonishing 14 years! We reported this amazing story in last week's edition! But although the Kyoto, Japan, housewife's marathon pregnancy generated headlines around the world, soft-spoken, shy Tomiko shunned interviews with the media. Now, for the first time, she has agreed to describe her experiences — in her own words — exclusively for Weekly World News!

My pregnancy was an ordeal. There were times I thought the baby was dead inside me, or that my whole system would slow down so much my baby and I would both die. But when my little son Seigi was born and I held him in my arms at last, it was worth every year I spent pregnant with him.

By TOMIKO ORIHATA

My husband and I have wanted a baby ever since we married in 1985. At that time I was healthy girl of 19 and we expected a pregnancy to come immediately. But months passed — and then years — and still I did not get pregnant.

Finally after nearly three years of crying, we consulted the infertility specialist Dr. Motokazu Hamada.

After a course of drug treatment failed to produce a pregnancy, we agreed that the sperm – was the best chance for us.

We underwent the procedure and within a short time Dr. Hamada told us it was successful. A fertilized egg was implanted in my womb and tests showed that it had been implanted effectively and was growing into a healthy fetus.

We were so overjoyed. We moved to a larger apartment and I bought a baby bed. My husband's mother gave me baby clothes and my parents held a celebration. Everybody was looking forward to the baby's birth.

Dr. Hamada kept close watch to be sure everything was going well. But I began to worry that it was going too slowly.

After four months of pregnancy the fetus was still extremely small and its development was severely retarded.

But tests and examinations showed the baby was normal in every way. Its little heart was beating, and it reacted and moved just as a fetus in the early stages could. more. My husband and I assured that we do nothing whatsoever that might endanger the baby.

After one year I was suffering constant sickness and tenderness as my breasts had was clearly developing, and ultrasound showed it appeared to be normal.

By the end of the seventh year I began to look like I was expecting a child. My morning sickness was severe and I felt more energy, but I was terribly frustrated and Dr. Hamada suggested I get psychological counseling.

The last four years were the worst. By that time I was heavily pregnant and anxious to finally give birth. Women who have normal pregnancies are fed up after just nine months — can you imagine what I went through after 14 years of expecting?

Finally, I was told that my baby was ready to be born. I was overjoyed. I had been pregnant for so long that I had begun to wonder if I would ever be able to give birth. I was so happy that I cried.

The baby was born by Caesarean section. I was given an anesthetic and I was unconscious for the birth. When I awoke, I was told that my baby was a boy. I was so happy that I cried again.

I named him Seigi, which means "justice" in Japanese. I chose this name because I felt that my baby had been born to me by a miracle, and that he was a gift from God.

Seigi is now two years old. He is a healthy, happy child. He is the light of my life. I am so grateful that I was able to have him.

I have been asked if I would like to have more children. I would like to have another baby, but I am not sure if I will be able to. I am 37 years old, and I am not sure if I will be able to get pregnant again

BOW WOW!

By KATE McCLARE/Weekly World News

New device translates dog talk into words!

DOGS and their human pals can finally speak the same language, thanks to a gadget that's taking the pet world by storm: Bowlingual, an electronic tool that actually translates dog talk into our words!

With a small microphone on the dog's collar, Bowlingual sends the dog's barks and whimpers to a handheld receiver that translates the sounds into simple messages that it displays on its screen.

Messages include "I am sad. I want to play" and "I am super angry. I want to explode!"

All told, Bowlingual helps you figure out six of Fido's feelings: frustration, anxiety, sorrow, demand and self-expression.

It's made by the Japanese company Takara, which sells it for about $120. It's sold out so well in Japan, the company may soon bring it to America.

Bowlingual has earned lots of praise from animal lovers, including a magazine that honored Takara for promoting harmony between the species. And if it keeps just one dog from pissing on the carpet because her master couldn't figure out she wanted to go out, that reward will be well-earned!

HOWLWATCHING TAX: This device won't be inexpensive any more, now that Mr. O'Hair has the Bowlingual translator.

HOW TO GET OUT

By MARK CARR, [illegible]

YOU CAN make [illegible] money, pay off your debts without chopping up a single credit card, and live high on the hog day after worry-free day with rock-solid tips from ordinary people just like you.

And you don't have to invest a million dollars in high-risk stocks, stop buying clothes for your children or treating yourself to nights on the town to turn your finances around, either.

All you have to do is listen to some common sense advice and real-world tips offered up by men and women who decided to stop [illegible] lives [illegible] greedy bankers and [illegible] agencies and start working and spending smart for a change.

By applying one or more of these simple principles to your life you'll soon find yourself strutting around town with cash in your pocket, shopping when you want to shop and buying what you want to buy and STILL paying every bill on time.

How I found financial security & live debt-free on $17,000 a year

"If I found financial freedom, anyone can," chortles Joe Delaosa, who earns just $17,000 a year as a [illegible] but still has enough money to pay the mortgage on his $120,000 home, lease a new Chevy Prism, send his daughter to college and treat his stay-at-home wife to dinner at Red Lobster, Denny's or Sizzler every Saturday night.

Joe Delaosa

"I know it sounds too good to be true," he continues. "Two years [illegible], I thought the same thing.

"It's simply a matter of paying attention to where you're spending your money and what you're spending it for. Once you've got a handle on that, you ask yourself a couple of questions: Am I going to leave my life savings to make big shot bankers and businessmen even richer than they already are? Or am I going to look out for who's really important in my life — me and the people I love?"

Before making the changes that enabled him to take control of his finances Delaosa says, he received as least five threatening telephone calls from credit card companies, bill collectors and collection agencies — week after miserable week.

"I realized I was going deeper and deeper into debt by blowing all my money on expensive and unhealthy fast foods, two car payments, a large and flashy wardrobe and making one bad loan after another to coworkers, family members and friends," he says.

Delaosa slashed his monthly spending from $2,700 to $1,000 by using [illegible] restaurants. "I discovered I'm as good at any cook as a restaurant, and it's fun, too," says Delaosa, who showed a whopping $1,100 off his weekly food bill. It used to be $1,[illegible]. Now it's $[illegible].

● Selling one of his two cars to slash his transportation costs from $600 a month to $210 a month.

● Not loaning money to deadbeat friends who never repay loans. This saves him a staggering $75 to $100 a month.

● Not using his credit card for [illegible]. "I stopped using my credit card for gambling and trips to the malls that I've saved tons by not even receiving the cards and thousands [illegible] words and thousands of dollars every year."

Before I get smart about earning, I thought nothing of buying four or five shirts, Sally Rand singing fish for myself and my friends," he explains. "These days, I wouldn't buy four of anything unless I was getting two pairs of shoes at a Thirty-four per pair or another pair free sale."

To [illegible] his financial house [illegible], Delaosa refinanced the [illegible] he owed on his 1979 [illegible], reducing his monthly payment from $750 a month to $190 a month. His utility bills average just $80 a month because he turned off his fur[illegible] and started using a wood stove "and lots of blankets" for heat in winter. He used to pay $360 for electricity alone.

In exchange, he says, "I open the windows in real things all. If I want air-conditioning, I visit a friend — or go to the mall."

"I still have five credit cards carrying a balance of over $18,000," says Delaosa. "To bring that under control, I went to the banks that issued them and told them flat out that I'd declare bankruptcy if they didn't help me out.

"They agreed to let me make smaller payments, and now I'm paying them off at a clip of $220 a month instead of $300. Not only that, they still let my pre-

Mann. "I average $400 a month just keeping my ears open and not being afraid to express my opinion. If I am standing in line at the supermarket and hear someone say he needs a new sofa or car repair or whatever, I chime in with a recommendation, and give them a business card for the company I'm recommending. It's the easiest money I've ever made."

Shill for companies in return for DISCOUNT FREEBIES. Like cars, major appliances and kitchen supplies of foods and personal-care items. Make a habit of writing glowing letters and testimonials for products you use every day — cars, shampoos, computers, refrigerators, soft drinks, food, mattresses, bedding, you name it.

Fred Tolert

You'll be surprised to find out firsthand how lavish big companies can be in rewarding people for testimonials — a lifetime supply of soap, a new laptop computer and even a new camper, refrigerator and car are not out of the question.

"I bought a pre-owned late Toyota Corolla from a dealer here in town and was so happy with the car and the salesman that I wrote a letter to the owner," says Fred Tolert, of Gallipolis, O.C.

"Two days later he told me to drop by the lot because he had 'a little something for me.' That little something was a 2002 Lincoln Navigator — and free oil changes for life. All I had to do was agree to let him use my letter in his advertisements."

Put yourself into hock to the debt — by going back to college! It sounds crazy, but study after study confirms that you can expect to earn an extra $1 million over the course of your career — more than enough to get out of debt and live high on the hog — after you earn and apply your four-year degree.

Leslie Player

Unless you're just too old to go back to work, taking out the dent loans to pay for more education makes good financial sense, financial experts say. "I took out $60,000 in student loans and it was paid off for me," says Leslie Player of Birmingham, Ala. "I used to make $300 a week working in a dry cleaning plant. Now I'm an environmental engineer making $1,200 a week — and the benefits are incredible."

Start eating smart, silly! A mind-blowing 61% of Americans are overweight. If you fall into that category, and statistically, you almost certainly do, you can slash your food bill — and flush out the flab — by changing the way you eat.

Remember: When you buy food that someone has prepared and packaged in any way, you're spending two to 20 times what it will cost you when purchased whole and raw.

Sure, you can buy a package of pre-mixed salad greens for $3. But you can purchase them separately and toss them yourself spending the same $3 — but instead of having just one salad, you'll have ingredients enough to make five or six, slashing the price.

"Everybody's talking about 'whole-food diets,' which revolve around foods that are uncooked or only lightly cooked, such as vitamin and enzyme-rich fruits and vegetables," says Roger Lafayette, of Princeton, N.J. "I switched from my old meat-and-potatoes diet and instantly whacked $100 a week off my family's food bill. Not only that, but my cholesterol and high blood pressure returned to normal and my doctor took me off prescription drugs. That leaves me with another $75 a month to spend on things I really want, like that new fishing rod I've had my eye on."

Roger Lafayette

Give $30 to $50 a month to the world's most important charity — you. Don't say you don't have $30 to $50 — chances are good you're spending that much or more for home delivery of a daily newspaper that you could be reading free at work, borrowing from a friend or perusing at the public library.

Be ruthless in looking for ways to find your "money cash" and invest it. Remember: You don't have to risk a million in the stock market to realize a handsome return. Call a stock broker and don't be shy. Tell him you've got $30 — or $50 — a month to invest.

He'll help you build a financial future that, until now, you probably thought was beyond your reach. "I started out investing $40 a month in 1998, and my $2,400 investment is worth over $10,000 today," says Jolene Carentino, a single mother of five from St. Louis.

Jolene Carentino

"I thought a stockbroker would laugh at my plan to invest $40 a month. But he didn't — and today, even in a down market, I'm way ahead. And to think I used to live paycheck to paycheck."

GET OUT OF DEBT FAST

Warning to WWN readers . . .

BEWARE OF THE QUICK FIX!

TOP 10 DEBT FIX-UP SCAMS

NEW YORK — If you're drowning in debt and your credit is bad, you've probably been tossed a bunch of lifelines by companies who claim they can rescue you in a snap. But chances are it's a phony fix-up and you'd just sink like a stone, warns a top government agency!

"Using these quick fixes to pay off your debts is like getting on a merry-go-round that never stops," says Mary M. Chen, executive director of the New York State Consumer Protection Board. "These so-called services only compound your debts and possibly create even more credit problems."

Here are the Consumer Protection Board's Top 10 Phony Fixes and why you shouldn't even think of using them:

1 "Guaranteed" loans. All you usually get for your money is a lot of hassle — which you have to contend yourself. "Your money is taken and you get nothing at all — certainly not a loan," says Chen.

2 High fees. Some credit-repair firms charge hundreds of dollars for their services, but do nothing — adding another debt to your pile.

3 Credit-repair kits. Many consumer companies sell information that's already available for free or charge a fee to find an obscure company that charges predatory interest rates for a high-risk loan.

4 Watch your money disappear. Some agencies claim they can make bad debts disappear from your credit history. But there's no way to get negative information off your credit file unless the information is incorrect — and you can get in trouble yourself without having a clear. You may even be entitled to a free copy of your credit report if you're disputing it.

5 Get out of debt quickly and cheaply. Paying off debts can take a long time and may not be easy.

6 Waves in wash's clothing. Credit-counseling services can actually get your creditors to charge less interest and lower your payments. But some of these services have actually ripped off their clients by not sending payments to creditors. Be sure you use a nonprofit service that's a member of the National Foundation of Credit Counseling.

7 New name, new problem. Some credit-repair companies have their clients apply for an Employer Identification Number and claim that it can be used instead of a Social Security number. They're wrong — and if you try this you could be breaking the law. Even worse, the company that charged you money to get the number won't be held liable.

8 Borrowing more money. Some companies claim you can clean up your credit by taking one of their cards and making payments on time for at least three months. But all this does is add another debt — which can hurt your rating even if you do pay on time.

9 Pay off your debts with no interest. They might not call it "interest," but you're still paying something. Maybe it's a membership fee or a service charge, but no one's working for free.

10 Pay off by not paying. Some companies actually advise clients to not pay their debts at all or to pay only a portion. Most of these firms are being prosecuted for fraud, says Chen.

their own spending patterns and other suggestions to one another for cutting them down to size. It's not only a great way to socialize with fun, the result could be the financial freedom you crave. "My Skinflint Club has 12 members and together we've slashed $1,200 a week in frivolous or dumb spending from our household budgets," says Sammy Klowers of Spartanburg, S.C. "We're working on getting out from under high interest debt now and on bringing our total budgets in line."

9 Create yourself "Hilary — or Karen — of Garage Sales" — and hold one every week without fail. Let's face it, there's a little bit of a shopaholic inside all of us. Garage sales are a great way to satisfy your addiction and get rid of unwanted junk for free.

Amy Sanner

Leave the junk on the street for the trash collector and keep the good stuff for your garage sale.

"One garage sale isn't going to pay for your fingernails — but after a week with the whole family helping, you'll be surprised at how much you've made," says Amy Sanner of Chattanooga, Tenn.

"I hold a garage sale every Saturday morning and spend every Saturday afternoon cleaning out someone else's garage."

That gives me a week to research the items I'm going to sell and plan for my merchandising prices. I average close to $150 a week, more than enough to make me car payment and pay for my weekly crab legs and beer ball at Red Lobster.

10 At a complete loss over the best way to bring your finances under control? Consult a bankruptcy attorney and find out precisely where you stand financially. The consultation is free and the attorney can quickly tell you what you need to do to get out of debt. Bankruptcy usually isn't necessary and most attorneys will be more than happy to put you on the right track because they know you'll refer them lots of relatives and unfortunate friends. It was months before I finally sucked up the courage to consult a bankruptcy attorney, but I wish I had sooner. I could have saved myself a lot of grief and money.

Candace Morgan

11 Spend cash and quit before the money you owe — and it will. Depending on your temperament, you can either view your debt as a positive challenge and keep an open mind about the outcome, or you can become overwhelmed by the negative aspects and let that get you down.

Fred Blankenship

I've used both approaches at different times in my life, and I can tell you that the former is much more productive. Whatever you do, don't let the debt get you down. Keep a positive attitude. Remember you are where you are because you've been presented many opportunities after another," says Fred Blankenship of Virginia Beach, Va.

"Now that I've opened my eyes, good things happen to me almost every day. I got a new supervisor recently because I heard a small rumor about the opening while I was on the job.

"And I'm convinced that [eliminating debt] has made me more productive at work. I have good things to happen and that helps me be a better employee."

12 Liquidate. If you really need to be making payments on cars that have stolen other people's identities and all the other junk you've bought, consider keeping only the bare minimum.

Sell everything you can part with or have outlived its usefulness to the private market. Don't worry about the sentimental value of your possessions. Remember, you're trying to get out of debt, not hold on to the past.

Morgan Ratzenberger

To get started, you might want to have a yard sale. Take photos of items you're selling on eBay or Craigslist. Ask friends or family to help you.

"Want a real rush? Get rid of something that costs you $300 a month in payments," says Morgan Ratzenberger, of Kansas City, Mo. "Be ruthless. I got rid of my new car and bought a cheaper one a month ago and saved $320.

"I sold the appliance company to take back my 20-cubic refrigerator and bought a used model at the thrift store for the saving the monthly payment of $40.

"Now I've got dollars to spend on me and things I really like. It's like winning the lottery every day."

Today's kids sniff cow chips!

COW MANURE is typically covered by a bowl and sniffed through straws inserted into it, as these kids are doing

By MIKE FOSTER

ABILENE, Texas — So many U.S. teens are now getting high from sniffing manure that horrified educators, family values advocates and law enforcement officials are calling for a ban on the stomach-turning practice.

But a group says that idea stinks — because members sniff manure to improve their health and claim a daily whiff of cow pie can keep a host of illnesses at bay, ranging from Lou Gehrig's Disease to brain tumors.

"Sniffing manure for medicinal purposes has been a tradition in Asia for thousands of years," notes activist Jim Wingold, an outspoken advocate of the practice and director of the Dallas-based Manure Use Rights Coalition.

ma, arthritis, hemorrhoids, impotence, heart disease and even cancer.

"The U.S. government should ban the practice of manure sniffing and have all scientific studies to see just how powerful a cure manure really is."

Lawmakers turn up their noses at that proposal, noting they've been swamped by calls from parents of teens addicted to manure sniffing.

But smart Wingold declares politicians can't let themselves be swayed by a bunch of irreverent know-nothings.

"Lives are at stake here."

It was in the early 1990s that recreational manure sniffing first surfaced in the U.S., believed to have been brought over by Mainstream immigrants.

Activist Wingold

Soon, hundreds of teens had given up cocaine, crack and other illegal drugs in favor of the natural high from cow pies.

Now, there are more than a million manure sniffers in the Southwest. Educators say they've seen the numerous effects of the trend, including the embarrassment that has led to increased truancy and vandalism.

"Students are coming to school high on manure and they don't want to be disturbed," says a high school teacher in Abilene.

"They come back with a glassy look in their eyes and a stupid smile on their faces. You look at their shoes and you know exactly what they've been up to."

But advocates of cow-pie sniffing claim it has improved their health.

"I had a friend who was dying of cancer," says a 42-year-old engineer who asked to be identified only as Seth.

"Then a friend told me about sniffing cow manure and I thought, 'What do I have to lose?'

"After sniffing cow manure for six months my cancer cleared up."

Editor's note: Weekly World News does not endorse manure sniffing in any way, shape or form.

Always consult with your physician before sniffing raw manure.

Widow flushed man's ashes down the toilet 11 years ago!

HAVE you ever tried doing your business with something looking underneath you? asks LuAnn McGarvey

WACO, Texas — An exorcist is about to plunge into a daunting task: Rousting an evil spirit from a haunted septic tank!

If all goes according to plan, the Rev. Rex Moore will flush the malevolent ghost of Charlie McGarvey from its dwelling place beneath the dead man's former home and send it where it belongs — the bowels of Hell.

"It doesn't look as if this will be my most pleasant assignment," the Rev. Moore acknowledges. "But I trust in the Lord to give me strength."

'Hubby's ghost is haunting my septic tank!'

The priest was called in by McGarvey's desperate widow, living and loving LuAnn McGarvey, who claims that the unearthly moans, groans and howls of her late husband can be heard rumbling through the plumbing at all hours of the day and that a hideously foul scent wafts up from the cast-iron tank.

"I've had the septic tank pumped out at least seven times and it hasn't made a lick of difference," LuAnn says. "Charlie's still there.

"Every time I use the sink, flush the toilet or take a bath I can hear him wailing, hollering and trying to drive me crazy. Have you ever tried doing your business with something looking like a sick bear under you?"

LuAnn says she's been living with the septic tank specter since she first had Charlie's remains cremated 11 years ago. A lifelong atheist, Charlie surrendered to liver failure at the age of 58. LuAnn came home from the services with Charlie's ashes — and gleefully flushed them down the toilet.

"Charlie was a lazy, worthless old coot who verbally abused me," she explains. "I suppose flushing his ashes was my way of getting back at him.

"I didn't know he'd come up with a new way to making my life a living Hell."

The widow, who has been unable to sell her Waco home since it got the reputation for being haunted, says the final straw came this January, when her visiting sister was also terrorized by the unfluatable phantom.

"My kid sister was sitting on the john and this voice comes booming up, 'Get your fat butt out of here.'" LuAnn says. "She told me for sure it was Charlie. That's when I decided I have to get rid of his ghost for good."

Rev. Moore believes the tank has indeed been invaded by an evil entity.

"I've heard howling myself — and that hellish smell just won't quit," he says. To do battle in the possessed septic tank next week, the gutsy minister has ordered some unconventional gear — including a special protective suit and gas mask. But he's also bring-

HOW YOU CAN SURVIVE A TERRORIST ATTACK

. . . & protect yourself and your family!

HANG THIS PAGE ON YOUR REFRIGERATOR – IT COULD SAVE YOUR LIFE!

By WAYNE DIAZ

BOCA RATON — Everyone from President Bush to Homeland Security honcho Tom Ridge has said it: Another terrorist attack on American soil is imminent.

However you don't have to sit idly by while the bad guys strike back. There are steps you can take to protect yourself and your family, experts say.

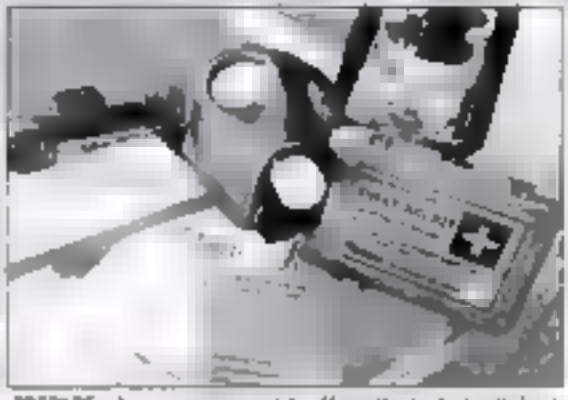
The terrorist attacks of 9/11 were just the beginning, states Bill Johnson, an Israeli-based anti-terrorism expert. While people say there want to destroy the country and democracy is their greatest weapon. But we all can improve our chances of survival by becoming ready.

According to Johnson, a 40-year veteran of the Israeli Defense Forces, most people think both about terrorism and long-term when preparing for a terrorist attack.

First, you must survive the attack itself, whether it's a bomb blast, chemical or radiological," Johnson explains.

Then you must deal with the long-term consequences, which can range from widespread outages to martial law. Those who think and plan ahead will be the ones who fare the best."

Johnson, the FBI, the Red Cross and other agencies offer the following tips for surviving a terrorist attack.



PREPARE a home emergency kit with enough food, water, a flashlight, and other essentials to last three days.

● Stock up on gas masks for yourself and your family. Although gas masks may not be completely effective against chemical attacks, they can help you escape from a contaminated area. Johnson also says it is a good idea to have plastic sheeting and duct tape on hand to seal doors and windows in your home.

● Prepare a home disaster kit. It should contain food and water for three days, a first-aid kit, flashlight, battery-operated radio, emergency cash, personal medications and an extra pair of glasses.

● Create a "safe room" in your home. Be very selective when you pick your "panic room." Otherwise you'll have a place of protection waiting to collect flowerpots and furniture. Keep it a "need-to-know" place.

CREATE a "safe room" away from windows where you and your family can live during an emergency.

● Make up an emergency plan with your family. Decide on a meeting place in case you're separated. Make sure everyone knows how to turn off the gas, water and electricity in your home.

● Be observant in crowds and stay alert. Keep an eye out for suspicious-looking packages and people who look or act suspicious. Never let someone close to you "watch" your bags, and always keep your belongings with you at all times.

● Think twice about flying on certain days. Terrorists have struck on holidays and anniversaries of significant events. Consider postponing travel on those days.

YUKON, Alaska — Scientists have discovered an enormous pile of ancient poop that dates back thousands of years!

And the mountain of smelly waste has them in something a-twitch. A towering mess of dung, grass and gravel dating back to the Stone Age.

Biologists from the Yukon Department of Renewable Resources say the dung was piled 8 feet high and covered a half-mile of wilderness.

"It was like looking at 'The Twilight Zone,'" says one scientist. "You could see clues from a distance — big, lumpy bunds of feces. I'm talking tons of it."

Lab analysis later determined that the dung came from centuries of caribou herds migrating through the Yukon. It had been there for thousands of years, and was exposed when a glacier melted.

Bizarre product worked TOO well!

Hair serum turned bald men into wolfmen...

By MIKE FOSTER

VICTIM got more than he bargained for after his hair returned with a vengeance!

VICTIM wanted to grow his hair back, and is shown in photo before he took the serum.

. . . but scientists say they've found a cure!

AMSTERDAM, — Excited scientists say they may have at last solved the mystery of a "miracle" Chinese hair-growing formula that turned at least 6,000 bald Dutch men into real-life wolfmen!

Chrome-domes who sampled the popular Wen Wei Po Miracle Hair Growth cream back in the 1980s found that it worked only too well.

Not only did they sprout full, lush hair atop their heads, they also developed coarse hair all over their faces and bodies.

Virtually overnight, to their horror, they came to resemble the fictional "dog-faced men" of old circus sideshows.

The Wen Wei Po formula was finally yanked off the market by concerned health officials in the Netherlands in 1988, but what caused the bizarre physical reaction has baffled medical researchers until now. "We have discovered that a chemical in the formula triggers the suppression of dormant genes for hair growth — the same genes responsible for congenital generalized hypertrichosis (CGH)," says Dr. Hans van Bruck.

"CGH is a genetic disorder that affects only a handful of families. This is the first time we've identified a chemical that produces the same traits."

The discovery explains why some of the men have been cured, he says.

"Once the dormant genes is switched, your glands take over producing a protective coat of hair just as our apelike ancestors had five million years ago.

"That's why, even after they discontinue use of Wen Wei Po, and no trace can be found in the bloodstream, the men continue to sprout hair."

Dutch stockbroker Wegener Vugelaar was the first known victim of the weird medical condition, Weekly World News reported back in 1992. Within days of trying the cream, Vugelaar, then 37, was delighted to find his bald spot filling in.

But by the end of the week, his joy turned to horror when he awoke with his whole face and body covered in black fur.

"I now look like a Hollywood wolfman," he says.

"My wife left me and I rarely go out in public anymore. I work from home and trade online."

Sufferers must shave seven to eight times a day to maintain even a semi-normal appearance. Most give up in frustration and stay out of sight.

"It's very sad. They live like the lepers of old," a health official said.

Dr. van Bruck hopes his discovery could finally lead to a cure.

"We have pinpointed the gene to the Xq24 q27.1 region of the X-chromosome," he says.

Other explanations he offers are over-fishing of the shark population, a presence of fewer bait fish in shallow waters where people usually swim and tourists being reluctant to go in the water because of rainy weather and fewer tourists can afford to go to the beach these days!

Gal trades watchdog for a WATCHPLANT!

'Screaming houseplant saved my life!'

Woman holds the miraculous Angel's Trumpet plant genetics so these which have wounded plants and saved people's lives

By MIKE FOSTER, Weird News Writer

LONDON — You may soon be trading in your loyal watchdog for a loyal watchplant. Botanists are now breeding plants to stand guard in homes and let out a piercing screech when intruders try to burst in!

The new approach was inspired by scores of cases over the past decade in which plants known as Angel's Trumpets have saved their owners from home invaders, intruders and even flies by "shrieking."

Tradition to popular belief, houseplants are not mindless inanimate objects.

"They have a very complex internal system, as we're known for years from studies that prove that speaking to them enhances their growth," explains Dr. Royce Bennett, a London botanist at the forefront of the new research.

"They can be loving and fiercely loyal to their owners and, in rare cases, exhibit an uncanny ability to protect humans in danger. All we're doing is taking that natural ability and enhancing it through selective breeding."

Unlike dogs, a plant won't be an obvious anti-theft device, but it can be equipped with a sensitive alarm that will scream when touched by an intruder. The expert points out that plants already have defense mechanisms that scare off predators, from a poisonous sap to the release of a foul odor.

Some of the intriguing cases from around the world cited by the expert:

WORLD'S LAZIEST MOM IS COUCH POTATO QUEEN!

She hasn't left the sofa in two years!

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Tubby Teresa Merkley is the world's laziest mom. And the hefty [redacted] hasn't budged from her beloved couch — literally — in 23 months!

The corpulent couch potato whiles away her time wolfing down ice cream and pizza in front of the TV while her harried hubby waits on her hand and foot — and rides herd over their four boys, ages 15, 13, 10 and 8.

But far from being ashamed of her shiftless behavior, the lard-butted lazybones is proud as a peacock of being a slacker — and even plans to write a book telling other wives how to goof off and get away with it.

"I used to be everyone's slave just like all those other mothers out there, wrecking my fingers to the bone changing diapers, cooking and cleaning. Then one day, I said to myself, enough is enough," recalls porky, 41-year-old Teresa, who tips the scales at 175 pounds.

"I told my husband, 'You're going to have to handle things for a while.' I stopped doing anything in the house and I've been happy ever since."

Teresa's husband Dan and her two oldest sons are responsible for all the chores in the home — washing the dishes, cooking, cleaning, vacuuming, ironing and caring for the two younger boys.

Dan admits his wife's goldbrick ways took some getting used to.

"I thought Teresa would take a break for a few weeks and snooze or relax, things would get back to normal. They just never did," he says.

"But Teresa is so happy now. I like things better this way. When she used do work around the house, she was so stressed she'd chew everyone's head off. Now she smiles and acts friendly and relaxed all the time."

Teresa literally never leaves the couch except to go to the bathroom. When she wants snacks, beer or her favorite takeout from the supermarket, she rings a bell and Dan or one of the teens rushes running.

"Dan is a self-employed Web page designer with a home office in the basement, so he can always hear my bell," Teresa explains.

Teresa recently won a World's Laziest Mom contest sponsored by a women's magazine. And that led a major publisher to offer her a book deal. She intends to start writing soon — if she can work up the energy.

"I want other ladies out there to know that they have a right to be treated like queens too," says Teresa.

Traveling hubby sends wife frozen sperm ... as an anniversary present!

Thelma Sarantopoulos, above, threw off the happy gift of sperm and teddy bear she received from traveling hubby Gus, most

HIBBARD, Ind. — A lovesick traveling salesman separated from his bride for nearly a year surprised her with the gift of a lifetime when he mailed her a vial of his frozen sperm held by a teddy bear!

And after undergoing artificial insemination at a Chicago fertility clinic, she's already pregnant with their baby!

"She has always been a hopeless romantic," bubbled beaming mother-to-be Thelma Sarantopoulos, 27, when she revealed her thrilling secret to an area radio talk show host.

Thelma said the couple's fairytale marriage was arranged by their parents who had just about given up on having grandchildren because she and her husband were so painfully shy with the opposite sex that neither of them ever dated or had a steady beau.

Mrs. Sarantopoulos said her groom was so nervous he nearly fainted at the wedding, and the first time he put his arm around her he trembling hands to place the ring on her finger.

The butterflies in her own stomach were so awful that she vomited at the reception.

But she revelled the wedding night as the time and said that was when the happy couple consummated their first time that their match was made in heaven.

"We sat up all night on our honeymoon munching on popcorn while watching videos of Chuck Norris, Sylvester Stallone, and some of my own favorite film classics, Linda Blair, and Alice A. of 'The Exorcist,'" the blushingly recalled.

After two glorious honeymoon, every night together was over too soon.

Their idyllic life together was interrupted when Gus was suddenly sent overseas by his company to sell fragrant scents in Kazakhstan and other nations of the old Soviet Union.

The disappointed couple kept their love alive with long letters and phone calls and grandiose plans. Their talk moved from their mutual love of horror films to a desire to share the family with children of their own, Thelma said.

Then Gus surprised her with the idea to have her visit a Chicago reproductive center where she was examined by the understanding medical staff and began a series of preparatory hormone shots.

A short time later she returned to the Windy City for completion of the fertilization procedure.

TER'S SALAD

IMMUNE-BOOSTING ANTI-BIOTERROR SALAD RECIPE

HERE'S all you need to make Dr Schwanthawski's salad and dressing.

Salad

3 leaves chinese lettuce
4 leaves spinach
1 tomato
2 carrots
1 cup raw broccoli
1 sweet pepper
1 tbsp papaya (optional)
2 tbsps cauliflower seeds
3 Brazil nuts
2 oz cheddar cheese
1 bay leaf
1 handful parsley
1 chili pepper
2 tbsps. toasted wheat germ

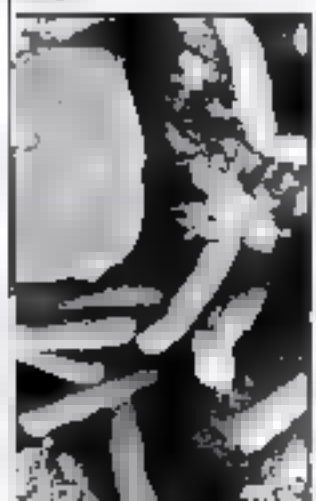
Slice, dice or shred all ingredients except the wheat germ, toss into one bowl and place bay leaf on top. Top with wheat germ.

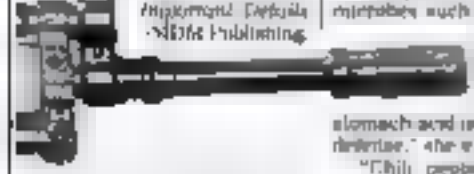
Dressing

Combine the following ingredients in a jar, and shake roughly to blend.

2 tbsps. extra-virgin olive oil
1 tbsp. apple cider vinegar
1 clove pressed garlic
1 tsp. kelp or seaweed granules

DR. DONNA Schwanthawski's immune-boosting salad recipe will help you fend off illness, whether it's terror related or just naturally occurring.





shamed into a constipation worker's mud-called lunch box.

"There's nothing that can protect you 100 percent against deadly agents like anthrax, bubonic plague and the Ebola virus," cautions Dr Schwanthawski, "but this salad is jam-packed with foods that can help everyone, from the poorest of the poor to the super rich, develop maximum immunity to protect their health, even when our immunity is under attack."

Dr Schwanthawski is no stranger to terror-fighting techniques.

She tackles the subject of terrorism in an important new book, Million Dollar Memory for Nurses and Nurses Use Crime Stopping Methods to Perfectly Identify Nurses & Learn How to Remember Important Details - Mills Publishing.

The book features preventive but easily implemented techniques to help authorities and citizens spot and stop terrorists before they strike.

"This is no time to take chances with your health," she counsels. "And if you want terrorists launch a bacteriological strike, it may be you last.

"I urge you to start building your defenses without delay. My salad is both economical and easy to make."

"The salad is delightfully crunchy, spicy and sweet," states Dr Schwanthawski, noting that each ingredient plays a special role in stimulating the body's defenses and protecting us from sickness.

"When it comes to fending off dangerous bacteria, and microbes such as those that terrorists might put in our water supplies, our stomach acid is a first line of defense," she explains.

"Chili peppers and red pepper on the salad stimulate production of stomach acid. The thiamine in wheat germ and sunflower seeds and the vitamin B 6 content of the wheat germ also help the production of stomach acid.

"Sunflower seeds also provide fiber, which helps the colon do its job. The last thing you need when you're sick is to be constipated — swimming in your own toxins."

And Dr Schwanthawski points out that broccoli and spinach are excellent sources of vitamins C and B-2.

"Vitamin C speeds recovery from viruses and bacteria and helps white blood cells produce bacteria-fighting enzymes in tears, saliva and sweat. Sweet potatoes, carrots, spinach and papaya are good sources of vitamin A."

Garlic is a good source of selenium, says Dr Schwanthawski, "as are the Brazil nuts, wheat germ and apple cider vinegar. Selenium enhances the ability of the white blood cells to kill bacteria.

"The olive oil, wheat germ, tomato and dark green vegetables contain vitamin E, which significantly enhances the body's ability to produce antibodies in response to pathogens.

"Wheat germ also is excellent for providing pantothenic acid that helps your body deal with stress. The cheese is a good source of B-12 which helps keep the white blood cell numbers up to kill microbes. And the seaweed and kelp provide the body with minerals and omega 3 fatty acids, which help cut down dangerous inflammation in the body."

BILLINGS, Mont. — Katie Fetcher's husband hasn't spoken to his bride since their marriage three months ago! No, the groom isn't mad over the cost of the wedding reception — he's made of plaster!

Katie, a 23-year-old hairdresser, shocked friends and family by tying the knot with "Manny," a strapping, 6-foot-2 mute department store dummy whom she first glimpsed while shopping for a television.

"My boss, no good ex-boyfriend, took my TV when he moved out," she says. "I was perusing through the sporting goods section of an electronics when I passed the most handsome man I'd ever seen standing there wearing a perfect suit fit. My heart started racing a mile a minute, even after I realized he was a mannequin!

Katie purchased a telescope and left the store, but couldn't get the silent sports enthusiast off her mind.

"He's everything I'm looking for in a man," she says. "Tall, skinny, cool, handsome and I knew I'd never have to worry about him coming home drunk after a night out with his buddies."

The smitten stylist began making excuses to visit the store's sporting goods department.

"I'd tell my boss I was going today to pick up some fishing tackle or golf balls," she admits. "And I don't even fish or golf!

Finally, Katie decided that she and her perfect match should become mannequin and wife. She arranged with the department store to have the wedding ceremony in the very section where she first spotted Manny.

FAT CANNIBALS GO ON ALL-PYGMY DIET

BENI, Congo — Weight-conscious cannibals have been trimming their waistlines — by feasting on Pygmies instead of normal-size natives!

Outraged Pygmies claim cannibals are targeting them for dinner in unprecedented numbers. And horrified U.N. investigators in northeast Congo confirm that man-eaters have cooked and eaten scores of the tiny villagers in recent months.

He watched in horror from a hiding place as the crazed cannibals killed and ate his 9-year-old nephew, according to an AP report.

After methodically butchering the boy, the cannibals roasted his body parts over an open fire — greedily grabbing chunks from the embers and stuffing them in their mouths, says the massacre survivor.

ATLANTA — Meet Cuddles, a tiny horse with a big job: Guiding a blind man to work, to the store and anywhere else her human partner needs to go!

The 2-foot high creature is a guide horse for blind people and trainers will receive their official graduation kit amazing. Though miniature horses are officially registered as U.S. guide horses, doing the same work as the guide dogs will be people who need additional guidelines for blind people be more than 30 pounds.

ESCALATORS pose no problem for Cuddles, a miniature horse trained to guide blind people. Cuddles wears sneakers on her hooves to muffle their sound.

NO MORE CLOP-CLOP. Cuddles wears special sneakers on her hooves to muffle their sound and protect them when she's walking on hard surfaces.

BUSH MAY LAUNCH MOSQUITO PLAGUE ON SADDAM!

WASHINGTON — Iraqi soldiers fighting Hussein says have stockpiles of terrifying biological weapons — but if he forces America to play dirty, we can, as a last resort, unleash a top-secret weapon straight out of the Bible: A plague of mosquitoes!

"In the Biblical story of the Exodus, one of the plagues visited upon the Egyptians was a horde of locusts.

"In a short-lived program in the mid-20th century, the U.S. Army reared 100 million yellow fever mosquitoes each week for possible use as a biological weapon against enemy troops," the Voice of America, our nation's pro-U.S. propaganda network, recently revealed.

Town bans all porch furniture

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — There won't be any more lounging on lawn chairs in this college town.

The city council is making unsightly "porch furniture" illegal.

Also banned as of March 1 are washing machines and other household appliances. Among those on the list of goods to be confined entirely to indoors: Violators can be fined $500 plus court costs.

Some say University of Alabama students were a target of the ordinance.

"Unfortunately, I have a hard time with the city telling someone what they can have on their front porch," says city council President Jerry Pitts, who cast a lone vote against the measure.

"This is a problem caused by university students who don't keep their houses up. We've already considered other options, like $5,000 bonfires in front of 25 residences."

An exception allows household pets to be spread across the lawn of those of a paid rate.

OSAMA'S GOT US ALL GRINDING OUR TEETH!

NEW YORK — What a grind! A dentist says months of stress brought on by war talk and depressing news stories have given Americans gnashing their teeth.

Dr. Clifford Williams says he's seen a 20 percent rise in the number of patients complaining of jaw pains and of discovering cracked enamel on their teeth.

He says he knows it's the economy and war because none of the patients with chomped-down choppers say they've been grinding away over sex.

BONUS PUZZLE

Serena Sabak

AMERICA'S SEXIEST PSYCHIC

Let Serena help you! Write Serena, Weekly World News, 600 Mamaroneck Ave., Suite 400, Harrison, N.Y. 10528. We'll forward your letters to her. Don't send money. Serena's advice is free.

PSYCHIC Serena Sabak, sister of Weekly World News' Psychic Sylvia Sabak

Sonya's Weekly Message: Hi everybody! Sonya here, back with more answers to your pressing personal problems. Not surprisingly, Serena is still sitting around on her fluffy butt probably because she's finally realized that she just can't compete with my supernatural psychic powers. She says she's still recuperating, but pooh, how long can that take? Anyway, I'll be here for as long as necessary, so keep those cards and letters coming! — Love, Sonya

Psycho co-worker has a fatal attraction to me!

Dear Sonya: There's a woman at work who won't leave me alone. She says we belong together, and leaves odd little gifts on my desk. I'm happily married, but I can't stop thinking about her, and I don't know how long I can resist her. Please tell me what to do. — Attracted in Denver

Dear Attracted: Dude, you're in way over your head and don't even realize it. My trusty Psychic Friend informed me via telepathy — you'll probably call it a coincidence — that this female is the life energy from another stupid enough to get involved with her. I've cast a special white spell to protect you until she moves on, no matter what happens, so all you've to do is "do" your life and ignore it.

Dear Serena: I was told by another psychic that the reason I don't have a man in my life is because pain and suffering have become my companions. I cry at the thought of going through life without someone to love. Can you tell me what the future holds? — Loveless in Connecticut

Dear Loveless: Sweetie, I'm afraid that other psychic was right. According to my crystal ball, potential lovers won't find you because your personal problems have tricked you in negative energy. I've cast a special spell to dispel your pain and replace that black light. The sun will be shining so you'll know it.

Dear Sonya: My head aches with strange voices at least once a day. I can't quite understand what they're trying to say to me, but they chatter for up to an hour. They slowly fade away. Please help me, Sonya! I think I'm going crazy. — Frightened in Willow Springs

Dear Frightened: You're not going crazy, you're an unrealized medium and those voices in your head are spirits trying to contact you from the Great Beyond. It's something that happens to me all the time. The next time you hear them, try performing a blue candle meditation to improve the reception. You have a gift — use it wisely.

Dear Serena: This may sound kind of weird, but my neighbor hasn't aged a day in the 20 years I've known him! We're not very close because he keeps to himself a lot, but the fact that he looks so young after so many years really disturbs me. Should I be concerned? — Puzzled in Spokane

Dear Puzzled: My clairvoyant powers tell me that you're not in any immediate danger, but I wouldn't get too close to your youthful neighbor. Something weird's going on there, most likely a pact with the Dark Side for eternal youth. These things never turn out well, so you're better off not getting involved.

Dear Sonya: My 5-year-old daughter has always been intelligent. She could recite the alphabet at age 3, and read at age 4. Neither her father nor I are anything special. I've enclosed a lock of her hair. Please tell me, Sonya, is my daughter gifted? — Hopeful Mom in Toronto

Dear Hopeful Mom: Your daughter is more than gifted, she's both intellectually and spiritually enlightened! A tarot reading revealed that her life's work — and I don't know exactly what that will be — will greatly benefit mankind. Do all you can to nurture her; she'll need all the loving support she can get.

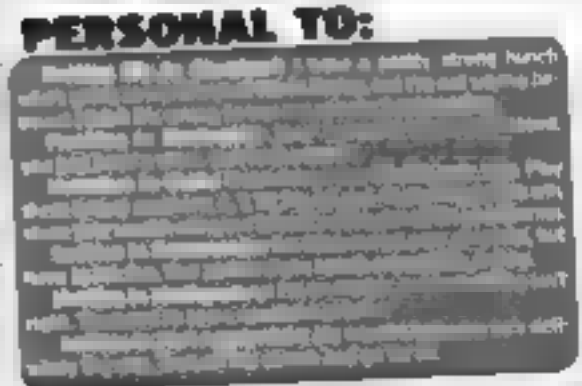
PERSONAL TO:



THIS WEEK'S SIX LUCKIEST LOTTO

I'm so scared of water I can't even take a shower!

Dear Sonya: All my life I've had a terrible fear of water. I can't even take a shower, much less swim in the ocean. Can you tell me why I feel this way? — Hydrophobic in San Diego

Dear Hydrophobic: You dislike water because you died aboard the Titanic in a past life. I suspected as much the moment I read your letter, and my suspicions were confirmed by a deep-meditation past-life regression. Contact the medium whose name I have sent you. She'll eliminate your fear and put that past life to rest.

Dear Sonya: My son seems to be completely under his wife's control. When he was younger, he listened to every word I said, but now he does everything his wife tells him to do. Has she done something to him? — Concerned Mom in New Jersey

Dear Concerned Mom: Your daughter-in-law has nothing to do with your son's unusual behavior. The fact is, marriage has helped him mature into a responsible young man. But just to be sure, I tossed the mystic Rune Stones three times to help you cut those apron strings. Rather than nag on your son, give him a hug and tell him you're proud of him.

Dear Sonya: My family has undergone a terrible tragedy. My husband was stabbed by my son during an attempted robbery. He's slowly recovering, but still has a lot of problems. Can you tell us what the future holds? — Overwhelmed in North Carolina

Dear Overwhelmed: Yours is not easy, but one with a happy ending. My crystal ball shows that once your son pays for his crime and cleans up his life, he and your husband will become closer than ever. I've cast a spell to help speed up your husband's recovery.

Dear Sonya: I think I've been cursed by a gypsy. I said something mean to a woman who sat in front of me in line at the store, but instead of yelling back she just muttered something weird and walked away. Ever since then I've experienced one terrible problem after another. Please help! — Bewed in Oklahoma City

Dear Bewed: Yep, you've been cursed all right — and by a gypsy who really knew what she was doing. I can tell by colour her gown as all over your letter. You seem genuinely sorry, so I'm sending you a special talisman. When it arrives, hold it in your hand as you recite a heartfelt apology, and the curse will be lifted.

Dear Sonya: I'm afraid to go to sleep at night because I sense a presence at the foot of my bed. It usually arrives around 11 p.m. and leaves before 6 a.m. Can you tell me what it is and how to get rid of it? — Fearful in Florida

Dear Fearful: You have nothing to be afraid of. I did a water meditation over your letter and learned the presence at the foot of your bed is the spirit of your childhood dog. He's watching you to ward it from because he loves and misses you. Take comfort in his warmth and don't worry

OSAMA'S NEW LOOK?

[redacted] officials claim the sneaky terrorist [redacted] has eluded detection by severely altering his appearance!

WASHINGTON — [redacted] Bin Laden [redacted] taken on a [redacted] of ingenious disguises that have enabled him to avoid capture since September 11 — and Weekly World News has the exclusive!

American intelligence officials are planning to start worldwide distribution of a new series of "Wanted" posters for evil terrorist mastermind Osama Bin Laden.

Agents say the posters will display the "new looks" adopted by Bin Laden, who has eluded a global manhunt for more than a year.

"It's obvious what went wrong," said a government agent who spoke on condition of anonymity. "We've been going all over the world with posters asking if anyone has seen this guy — showing a bearded giveaway with a towel on his head. He's not stupid as to fall into that trap."

Osama may even be willing to trade with his familiar look, hoping not as a hunger-striking captive.

By RICHARD BYRON
Weekly World News

Intelligence officials say that Bin Laden has not been spotted because he has changed his appearance. He has not issued any new taunting videos because he wants to hide his new look.

"But we've been hot on his trail," the agent said. "We have a good idea of the various disguises he is using, based on intelligence from Al Qaeda turncoats. We'll use these disguises on the new posters and see if they ring a bell with anyone."

Earlier reports placed Bin Laden in France, where he was plastic surgery to be altered.

"If he made it to France, there's only one way he could have done it — in disguise," the agent said. "The new posters may reveal his whereabouts."

THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH CAN BE YOURS

Special report: "The recent discovery of a new natural product may one day spell a major breakthrough in health and aging", declared a research fellow at the National Institute of Aging in Baltimore, MD. Dubbed by researchers at Natural Institutes of Health "life's most exciting finding and it certainly looks strongly as if this enzyme is going to play an important role in reversing aging and promoting a long life" he said.

The new enzyme has already been dubbed "Fountain of Youth" by researchers specializing in anti-aging and turning back the clock. Early research suggests that this enzyme may help a person look and feel younger by actually turning back the aging process at the cellular level. And preliminary tests indicate that the new discovery may help prevent and even reverse many age related diseases.

According to a New York leading cosmetologist and nutrition specialist "If our male people in their 40's look like they're in their 30's, while people in their 50's now look like they're 40 or 45."

An Atlanta physician and biochemist physical therapist specializing in aging at Emory University Hospital reports that in her study she found evidences of patients and "marked reversals."

A doctor at Hospital in Los Angeles, California, said "I have used it on over 4,000 persons. Within weeks people begin to feel healthier and stronger. Within one to three months the wrinkles and lines in their faces begin to disappear and their actually start looking younger. Their skin has a better color and their bodies become stronger and more youthful. It is very definitely an anti-aging substance that slows down degenerative diseases."

Scientists believe the recent breakthrough could result in the ability to control the aging process, thus preventing the onset of premature aging, and to benefit both the young and elderly alike.

So impressed are the medical authorities in another publicly held company that they are [illegible] "this is a miracle compound. You can literally turn back the hands of time with this new discovery!"

HOW TO FIGHT WITH YOUR SPOUSE

By KATE McCLARE

BOCA RATON, Fla. — The secret to a happy marriage is learning how to work out disagreements without losing control, according to top relationship experts. And the best way to fight is to do it like the pros — pro athletes!

Every day of the week, somewhere in the world, conflicts are being worked out by two sports teams or by a pair of athletes. No football team ever won a Super Bowl, no boxer ever won a title fight, without squaring off against an opponent.

And the more they compete, the better they are.

The next time a conflict arises in your marriage, cackle the problem like the World Series champion Anaheim Angels or tennis ace Serena Williams — and you'll soon find yourself with a top-seeded marriage. Here's how:

■ Schedule your match-up. Prizefighters don't just jump in the ring when they feel like punching each other out. Their bouts are planned long in advance. When major conflicts arise, try to schedule a discussion when you're both calm and when distractions will be minimal.

■ Have a game plan — and practice. Get your arguments together before you move your mate. Work on defense and put offense. Try to imagine what your spouse's arguments will be, and be prepared with a [illegible]

■ Respect your opponent. Don't make personal attacks on his appearance, but nothing to his mother. And don't underestimate him by failing to come up with a sound argument.

■ Fight fair. Don't play dirty by hurtling into topics or dredging up that affair she had last year. Stick to the match you've agreed to play, and don't bring up old offenses.

■ Call a time-out. If things start getting tough, take a break to rest and regroup. Go to separate parts of the house until you're ready to start talking again. But first, agree on a time to get back on the field and try again.

— and be a good sport about it!

GETTING physical doesn't solve disagreements. Take a cue from athletes other than Mike Tyson and John McEnroe and be a good sport when arguing with [illegible]

SUMO WRESTLERS TO DOUBLE AS CONFRONTERS

TOKYO — Wouldn't it be nice if your boss [illegible] to squash them?

The wrestlers are practicing shoving techniques, hoping to help them [illegible]

"Frequent shoving of something is what would run away if they were confronted by a sumo wrestler," one wrestler says.

Crooks may not have to worry about grappling with the corporate giant's bodyguards, the wrestlers won't be armed, and if they do spot a crime they'll just shove a stadium to alert the authorities and perhaps push down the offender.

THE SKULL of the Deinotherium Gigantisimum appears to have one eye socket and may have convinced Greeks that a one-eyed monster wandered the wilderness

IRAKLIO, Greece — Researchers on Crete have unearthed the fossilized remains of a prehistoric Cyclops-like creature that may have given rise to ancient legends about the fierce one-eyed monsters!

News readers respond...

'LEAVE OUR ALPHABET ALONE!'

BOCA RATON, Fla. — The results are in and they're as plain as A-B-C. Weekly World News readers like our alphabet just the way it is!

"What are you trying to do? Dumb us all down?" fumes Marjorie C. of Rockwall, Texas, of the proposal to lower the letters J, K, Q, X and Y out of the alphabet to make spelling easier for kids.

We asked you what you thought of the idea, and you responded to our Alphabet Poll, letting us know in very specific terms what you thought of it.

W.F.D. of Killeen, Texas, spoke for hundreds when he said it would be "stupid" to teach young people that the alphabet is only 21 letters.

"Think of all those wonderful books they couldn't read unless the government wants to reprint all of them," he pointed out.

John of Birch Tree, Mo., adds that all the Jenkins, Ellis, Johns, Jones and Jacksons of the country wouldn't take kindly to dropping the letter J, and Marjorie C. says rearranging the alphabet would save the rest of the world a good reason to put Americans on their stupid list.

Mar. 21 – Apr. 19

Following a creative urge now could lead to dramatic changes in your life. Don't be afraid to trust your instincts, wear red and take a chance.

Being too dependent may create budget problems. Stand on your own two feet and avoid an overdrawn status.

A change in plans may cause a small setback, but your goals are still be achieved.

TAURUS

Apr. 20 – May 20

Be prepared to take advantage of an unusual opportunity this week. Get advice from experts if necessary, but don't waste your money.

Your sense of loyalty could lead to problems when a married friend tries to get you into trouble. Rely on feelings or an in-law to do the right thing.

Get to work on an important household project you've neglected too long.

Anti-Aging Breakthrough

Better than Botox®?

"Who would have thought a stretch mark remover would turn out to be the anti-wrinkle breakthrough of the decade!"

In a remarkable turn of events, arguably one of the strangest in the history of cosmetics, women across the country are putting a stretch mark reducing ointment called "StriVectin-SD" on their face to get rid of fine lines, wrinkles, and sheer loss. And, if consumer sales are any indication of a product's effectiveness, StriVectin-SD is nothing short of a miracle. However, as word of a glowing number of "StriVectin" users are buying so much StriVectin-SD that finding a tube at your local cosmetic counter has become just about impossible. How everyone gone mad? Well... not really.

Scientific Breakthrough or Dumb Luck?

Although StriVectin-SD was already lauded for obvious results documenting its ability to visibly reduce the depth, length, discoloration and roughness of existing stretch marks, the success of StriVectin-SD as an anti-wrinkle cream was "dumb luck," says Gina Gay, spokesperson for Mark Burton. "StriVectin-SD's exclusive distributor.

"When we first handed our samples of the StriVectin formula to employees and customers as part of our market research, the people raved about simply marked topical cream' aside the 'all nutrition underneath,' says Gay explains. "As the samples were passed to friends and family, the message became a little muddled and some people used their topical cream as a facial moisturizer. As we began to receive feedback from users, they'd look 10 years younger and the crows' feet are gone," we knew we had something more than nutrition. most effective stretch mark reducer. The point was driven home as stars owners began reporting that above us many people were purchasing StriVectin as an anti-wrinkle cream, or were buying it to reduce stretch marks."

Dr. David B. Kikerpill, Mark Burton's Director of scientific Affairs, says, "Clearly, people were seeing results, but we didn't have a scientific explanation as to why this wrinkle-reduction was occurring. However, based on the incredible positive reports I started using it myself — applying StriVectin to my face after shaving," Dr. Kikerpill adds. "Our customers told my wife and I haven't looked this good in years."

Dumb Luck Strikes Again!

Then, on Tuesday, July 7, 2002, at a meeting of the 20th World Congress of Dermatology in Paris, France, a series of studies detailing the negative wrinkle-reducing properties of a patented tripeptide-copper complex (called the ACTIVE) —mixed retinol, vitamin C, and placebo, as "photo-aged skin" was presented. "We had known about it," Dr. Kikerpill states. "The wrinkle-reducing tripeptide behind all the breakthrough clinical trials turned out to be a rare, active ingredient in the StriVectin cream."

In the trials, subjects applied the patented peptide solution to one crows' feet area and one side of the face, and a cream containing either retinol, vitamin C, or a placebo to the other side.

Subjects in the [illegible] study applied the cream once a day for 3 months and then once a day for the next 3 months. Using special image analysis, the study's authors reported "significant improvement" in surface wrinkle volume and skin roughness for those women using the peptide solution.

Better yet, at the 3-month follow point, the peptide solution minimized skin injury 1.3 times better than retinol, and without the inflammation retinol often causes in sensitive skin. As was expected, the results of the remaining authors confirmed that the ACTIVE peptide is effective in reducing fine lines and wrinkles has exceeded both vitamin C and placebo.

In excellent younger complexion, less wrinkles, fewer wrinkles, and fewer results — all without expensive Lasik painful peels, implants or injections.

Better than Retinol and Vitamin C, but is StriVectin-SD Better than Botox?

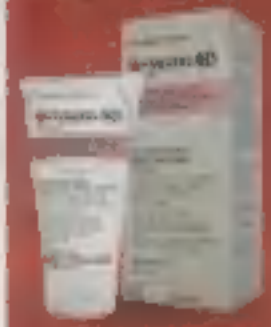
Dr. Nathalie Chemmay, Director of Women's Health at Salt Lake City based Mark Research explains, "Many researchers believe that invasive cosmetic alternatives are more effective than topicals. That's because 'cosmeceutical' creams and gels often penetrate, [illegible] results, while the effects of Botox and facial peels begin to wear off the very next day ... you'll never look better than you do immediately after treatment."

"On the other hand," Dr. Chemmay continues, "the cumulative effects of using a product like StriVectin-SD over three months can [illegible] many fine, and ultimately, last longer than Botox."

While StriVectin-SD has not been shown to eliminate the deep furrows targeted by Botox injections, the active ingredient in StriVectin-SD has been scientifically shown to significantly reduce their visibility in the deep and sometimes [illegible] with CP-D creams to now appearance. The type of fine lines and wrinkles Botox treatment leaves behind ... giving you a youthful, healthy, glowing complexion better than retinol, far superior to vitamin C, and without irritation, painful injections, or surgery.

So, if you are someone who has an anti-wrinkle cream open in their eyes, don't move this to [illegible] at the [illegible] end ... then you are probably [illegible] time.

Having a hard time finding StriVectin-SD™?



If you've been searching for StriVectin-SD and cannot locate it, don't feel alone! Apparently so has [illegible] the [illegible] cosmetic [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
